PHILADELPHIA BANKER BEATS TAINTOR BY $300,000 WITHT-OUT MUCH TROUBLE.

PHILADELPHIA, April 30, 1873.—Wall street may congratulate itself on its frequent "irregularities," and think in its gossamer that bankers and officials and persons outside its precincts are to small potatoes to merit a notice at its side; and in many cases Wall street is correct, but the details of the recent failure of Harrison Grambo, banker, of this city, throws in the shade anything you have had in Wall street in this line in some time, not even excepting the recent exploit of the tainted taintor, Mr. Harrison Grambo was certainly ambitious and so far as shrewdness the expense of principle entails a man's respect, so far as Mr. Grambo, entitled to applause for the manner in which he played his little game. If, however, this man congratulates himself on the present situation, with his character biased and his innocent wife and family made to suffer by his operations, then he possesses a nerve and effrontery unequalled in the annals of villainy. Mr. Grambo began his career at the foot of the ladder, indeed, it is said that his father's funeral expenses were paid some years ago by a collection taken up by the old gentleman's family business associates, and reduced him to the former become pecuniarily. After the death of the elder Grambo, the hero of this story engaged in a mercantile business, but, owing to the peculiarity of this method, it was not long before he found himself a complete wreck. His next effort was to become a man of letters, and on a large scale at once, and so far as assumption and cheek could give him one he had it. But the brokers of the city never took him very kindly. Philadelphia is not the place for a spurge, and any business man who ever took this method in Philadelphia has sooner or later found himself a dead weight in the pit. Grambo gave inner for inner, and kept on in the uneven tenor of his way, unmindful of the steady old burghers, who frequently prophesied his downfall. In course of time he fitted up his offices in a princely style, and working and contriving, were frequent recipients of Grambo's circulars, with the interior of the banking palace engraved thereon. The counting house and the private offices, with sofas and easy chairs, and all the papers and royal insignia, were therein displayed, and people who knew nothing of the inside working of this wonderful institution said Grambo was a wonderfully successful and working man, and farmers brought him their money to invest, and always received the interest promptly on time; but what of the principal? Echo answers, what? Mr. Grambo's sisters were provided with a comfortable home. Grambo moved into Walnut street, that locality so dear to the heart of Philadelphia respectability; costly pictures adorned his walls, the finest viands tempted his palate, and Grambo went on prospering with other people's money. Not content with possessing the finest offices, he fitted up a sub-office in gorgeous style in the rooms of the board of brokers, which was at once the envy of the younger members and an object of sarcasm to the older heads. The banking palace in Wall street—Mr. Grambo's office was also in Wall street—although very fine could hardly be expected to suffice for the Philadelphia Gould, and he began to cast his eyes around for a more palatial building wherein he might organize a banking establishment rivaling the American continent. There is in Chestnut street, a very elegant marble building, formerly occupied by Bailey & Co., jewelers, and this building the adventurous Grambo decided to possess. He sought out Mr. Joseph Tobias, the owner, and made a bargain with that gentleman. Mr. Tobias agreed to expend fifteen thousand dollars in repairs and alterations, and Grambo decided to move in as soon as possible. The repairs were concluded, and Mr. Tobias congratulated himself on such a desirable tenant. A few days ago, before Grambo was ready to move, an ugly rumor touching his solvency began to spread. An investigation proved the rumor to be true, and it took but two or three days to ascertain that Grambo had failed for seven hundred thousand dollars. A man to whom he was indebted for gardening went into the one night, and there found two furniture cars loaded with household furniture, awaiting the sight of a few more hours to remove them to the house occupied by the Grambos. A few days ago a crowd was attracted to the banking-house to see a remarkable sight, remove some iron work that Grambo had ordered. Two or three days elapsed and the financier of the period found himself arrested on three distinct charges for embezzlement. Bail was furnished in each instance, but there were more charges pending, and Mr. Grambo, from present appearances, has an excellent chance of verifying in his own person, the experiences of one who suddenly finds himself transferred from a palace to a prison. Speculation, a desire to ape the habits and follies of men who can afford to gratify their whims, and an overweening vanity and belief in his own cleverness, seem to have been the causes of Mr. Grambo's downfall, and the moral of the story, though plain, will be commented on for a day, and men will fall with other people's money just the same as ever. At a hearing today in the case of Grambo it was announced that a warrant had been issued forcing him into bankruptcy. His liabilities are seven hundred thousand dollars and his assets are as easily as the ordinary man carried off by the clothes-basket—I am persuaded that "the coming woman," like brother Jonathan, will "lick all creation." In that good time, woman will have her rights because she will have her muscle. Then if there are murders or playful beatings between husbands and wives, the wives will enjoy all the glory of crime. What an outlook! And what a sublime consolation to the present enfeebled race of wives that are having their throats cut and their eyes carved out merely because their biceps have not gone into training! Barnum's female gymnast is an example to her sex. What woman has done, woman may do again. Mothers, train up your daughters in the way they should fight, and when they are married they will not depart this life. God is on the side of the stoutest muscle, as well as of the heaviest battalions. It is perfectly useless for Miss Anthony to talk about the equality of the sexes as long as a man can strangle his own mother-in-law.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1873.—SIXTH YEAR
THE ALDINE,
 An illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the Handsomest Periodical in the world. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

Not for Sale in Book or News Stores.

ART DEPARTMENT.
 Notwithstanding the increase in the price of subscription last fall, when the Aldine assumed its present noble proportions and representative character, the edition will more than double the past year; proving that the American public appreciate a sincere effort in the cause of Art. The publishers anxious to justify the ready confidence thus lavished upon them, have exerted themselves to the utmost to develop and improve the work; and the plans for the coming year, as unfolded by the monthly issues, will as loudly and delight even the most sanguine friends of the Aldine.

The Aldine will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success, and greatest general interest; avoiding such as have become familiar, through photograph, or copies of any kind.

PREMIUM CHROMOS FOR 1873.
 Every subscriber to the Aldine, who pays in advance for the year 1873, will receive, without additional charge, a pair of beautiful oil chromos, after J. J. Hill, the eminent English painter. The pictures, entitled "The Village Bell" and "The Old Mill," are 14x20 inches and are printed from 25 different plates, requiring 25 impressions and tints to perfect each picture. The same chromos are sold for $30 per pair, in the stores. As it is the determination of its conductors to keep the Aldine out of the reach of competition in every department, the chromos will be delivered free of any charge that can be offered by other periodicals. Every subscriber will receive a certificate, over the signature of the publishers, guaranteeing that the chromos delivered shall be equal to the samples furnished the agent, or the money will be refunded.

THE LITERARY DEPARTMENT will continue under the care of Mr. Richard Henry Stoddard, assisted by the best writers and poets of the day, who will strive to have the literature of the Aldine always in keeping with its artistic attractions.

TERMS.
 $5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromo. The Aldine will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. Those who are reduced or club rate, or who for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local agent without responsibility of the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile of the publishers' names.

The Fever and Ague Powders will effect a cure in cases of the longest standing as well as prove a preventive in the forming stages of the disease. Being purely vegetable, they act with certainty, and without the least danger, drawing it from the system, and prevent a return at any future period.

Why waste your money and health in trying every medicine you hear of, when Thompson's Fever and Ague Powders have never failed to cure the Chills in any case.

REASONS WHY THEY ONLY SHOULD BE USED.

Their reputation is established. Thousands of testimonials have been received showing that these powders have performed miracles in curing cases of long standing, many of them considered hopeless.

There is no risk in taking them. They contain nothing injurious, and, therefore, none of the lingering diseases so often the result of the many nostrums of the day. Physicians recognize them as superior to quinine or any other known remedy, for they leave the system in a healthy state, and the patient beyond the probability of a relapse.
